

Create a Healthy, Productive Home Office

A personal workspace with all the perks

Work Better, Feel Better™

Remote work is quickly becoming the new norm. That means your home office needs to be just as productive as the corporate office. With the right tools, you can create a comfortable, healthy and productive workspace... with a shorter commute.

Configure for Comfort

Your monitor position matters. Set the top of the monitor frame at eyebrow level and place about an arm's length away, or approximately 20" to 35". This positioning helps prevent eye strain and neck strain.

Select a monitor or laptop support that maintains a monitor height that fits your personal comfort, or choose a monitor arm for more flexibility in screen positioning. Laptops should not be used for prolonged computer entry unless used with external input devices to prevent strain and slouching.

Hands-On Productivity

When you are more comfortable, you are more productive, especially when it comes to typing and mousing. Positioning the keyboard and mouse closer and lower to your body allows your shoulders to relax. The keyboard should be flat or tilted away at a negative slope. Keep your forearms approximately parallel to the floor with elbows at a 90° to -110° angle.

Your wrists should be straight with hands positioned level or below your elbow. Select an adjustable keyboard tray that accurately positions your keyboard for maximum comfort. Choose a wrist support to cushion your wrist to help prevent wrist strain.

The Active Home Office

Just as you incorporate movement into the corporate office, you need to stay active and flexible in your home office. Sitting for hours may feel productive but limited physical activity during the workday can drain your energy, morale and your performance. Go for a short walk or stretch, remember to take micro-breaks. You can also use a standing desk in your home office to keep you moving.

Begin by standing for 15 minutes, followed by 45 minutes of sitting. Gradually increase the time standing. Alternate between sitting and standing throughout the day, but don't sit or stand for more than 60 minutes at a time.

Maintain a Healthy Personal Workspace

It's important to keep your home office clean especially during flu outbreaks. Use a HEPA air purifier to consistently and effectively clean the air the air of viruses, germs, bacteria and other airborne pollutants. Be sure to choose your air purifier based on the square footage of your home office for the best results.

As a final step to keep your home office clean, look for products with the Microban logo. Microban® antimicrobial provides continuous protection against bacteria for products such as wrist supports.

Remote Work with Sensitive Documents

The risks of identity theft remain even when you work remotely. If you're managing confidential documents from your home office, be sure to follow your company's document destruction policy. Cross cut and micro cut paper shredders provide the highest levels of security. Find one that fits your home office.

At Home Document Protection

If you laminate for company events, office signage or handouts, don't miss a beat in your laminating workload. Home laminators are compact and portable and provide high quality laminating results while saving space.

Don't forget the laminating pouches. Choose larger pouch packs so you don't have to reorder. Be sure to choose the right pouch thickness for your projects. 5 mil offers a good mix of durability and flexibility. 3 mil is best for documents with minimal handling.
